How to open this Armory360 file

Someone who trusts you has given you a copy of their Armory360 records: firearms, ammunition, range days, maintenance and documents. It's in the file that came with this page, named Armory360-trusted-2026-10-19.a360.

You need two things

1. The file. Keep it somewhere safe; anyone with the file and its PIN or passphrase can read everything in it.
2. Its PIN or passphrase. The owner gives it to you separately, never in the same message or envelope as the file. This page doesn't contain it.

> This file holds personal records only. Having it does not transfer ownership of any firearm, ammunition or permit, or give anyone authority to possess, transport, sell or transfer them; the law where you are applies.

To open it

> It opens into an empty Armory360 vault. If the vault on that device isn't empty, back it up and erase it first.

1. On an iPhone or iPad, install Armory360 from the App Store. Installing it and opening this file are free.
2. Open Armory360 and set up your own PIN for the app. That PIN is yours, not the file's.
3. Save the file to the Files app, or AirDrop it to the device.
4. In Armory360, go to Settings → Your data → Restore from backup, and choose the file.
5. Enter the file's PIN or passphrase.

Everything is then on that device, opened only with the PIN you set in step 2. Armory360 keeps it on the device; nothing is sent anywhere.

If the PIN or passphrase doesn't work, check with the owner. Without it, Armory360 can't open the file.
